Our Expertise

gamecity:Hamburg is the most extensive regional network of the German gaming industry. Established in 2003 as a section of the Hamburg@work initiative for media, IT and telecommunication, gamecity:Hamburg optimizes local conditions for the digital entertainment industry. The network offers a range of services such as regular industry gatherings, a multitude of workshops, joint trade show appearances and the prototype funding program. gamecity:Hamburg focuses on supporting young companies by operating Gamecity Port, where start-ups find affordable office space. Junior staff development is one of the network's top priorities. The cooperation involves key partners including the Hamburg University of Applied Sciences (HAW Hamburg), co-host of the regular Gamecity Lecture Series featuring a lineup of business professionals and scientists who address a wide spectrum of relevant topics. HAW Hamburg has also been instrumental in creating GamecityLab, a crystallization point for all the companies in the region engaged in computer-based or computer-supported game production, allowing them to forge links with the university. gamecity:Hamburg and HAW Hamburg initiated the master's degree program in Games which started in 2010.
